BUILDING GAINS IN FIRST SIX MONTHS

Statistics for Half of Year 1920 Register Encour-

Encouraging reaction from the May slump is apparent in June statistics for building from 199 cities, which, as bfficially reported to the American Contractor, represent a total valuation of $131,117,320.

Considering that the upward turn has taken place during unprecedentdly poor freight service, and in the face of tight money, high material prices, and high labor costs, conditions which during June had shown little hope of speedy improvement, the upward turn is significant. It apells with no uncertainty the fact that men are keeping their grip on he situation, and that projects for building are going to be advanced, er at least held to the point of preparedness where they can be pushed at the first sign of a break.

COMPARATIVE FIGURES

Comparing thirty-one cities whose permits have gone over the million dollar mark gives for June a total of $88,470,475 and a total of $85,408,270 for May. This gives a gain of 31/4 per cent for June operations. In only six of these cities is June the low month for 1920. These cities are Baltimore, Dallas, Fort Worth, Minheapolis, Berough of Manhattan and Tulsa. For Atlanta, Los Angeles and the Borough of the Bronx the peak of 1920 activity is reached in June. The following tabulation of thirty one cities shows the total estimated valuation of building permits for the first six months of 1920; City.

Bigness Is a Magnet

By RONALD S. O'NEILL.

Fifteen hundred Government workers, employes of the Shipping Board, are to be transferred from Philadelphia to Washington in September. Where will they live? This question—a sérious one in the face of the already congested condition of Washington-confronts the real estate fraternity now.

Despite the fact that numerous separations from the Gov-ernment service have been effected during the past six months, Washington is still overcrowded. Though many builders have been engaged since early spring on construction enterprises, the building of homes has not kept pace in the National Capital

There is a particularly acute shortage in apartments in Washington. This shortage will, in all probability, grow more keen with the coming of autumn. Hundreds of Washingtonians, away for the summer months, have rented their quarters until September, but will return and require them at that time.

Real estate dealers are hopeful that rents can be maintained at approximately the present level during the coming year. In some of the newer apartments it may be necessary to advance rents, but the spirit of the dealers seems to be to maintain the present schedules if it is at all possible to do so.

One eloquent fact that is brought out by the Government's announced intention to transfer the Shipping Board employes, a fact that should take root in the minds of Washington builders, is this: Washington has attained to such BIGNESS that it can never materially go back in the matter of population. Washington has become and will always remain a MAGNET that will continue to attract newcomers in increasing numbers

Once this fact does take root, the trepidation of builders, ever fearful of a mythical "bottom dropping out," will disappear and these builders will courageously venture to build sufficient homes to take care of Washington's population. Until this time comes there will always be an overcrowded and congested Washington.
